NO CHANGE will be made in the place of hold ing the National Republican Convention at Chicago. The Opera House will be fitted up to hold twenty-eight hundred excluslve of the convention.

THE NEWARK, New Jersey, people are out of patience with the steam man, and the Courier of that city says: "When will this humbug, all about as true as a soda boiler in a sauce pan, come to an end? That which is called 'the steam man' never did, and, in all probability, never will, walk the length of his nose."

THE RADICAL county convention met at Alexandria, Virginia, yesterday, and, after a stormy session, nearly half the delegates withdrew Those remaining nominated delegates to the State Convention, which meets in Richmond on the 6th of May, and instructed them to vote for Hawxhurst. They also recommended General Looker for Congress, and nominated one white man and one negro for the Legislature.

GEORGE week the Episcopal Church at Springfield, Greene county, Missouri, was struck by lightning while the congregation was in it at worship. The fluid struck the top of the roof near the rear of the building, and passing down the timbers, tore off the weather-boarding without and the plastering within, nearly destroying one end of the building. No one was hurt.

A RADICAL editor, newly imported from Massachusetts, undertook to give the people of Kansas City, Missouri, a practical lesson in negro equity one day last week. He presented a negro with a ticket to some amusement in Frank's Hall, in order to make a case for judicial decision The negro went to the show, and was set out by a Radical constable. The officer was tried and acquitted by a Radical jury and a Radical justice. Radicalism out West differs sentimentally from Southern scalawaggery.

IF ice customers at concerts in New York now, when a singer is to be complimented, to make up a dozen or so ordinary bouquets into a basket about the size of an Orange county cheese, and hand it up over the orchestra to the artiste, whose absurd appearance as he or she carries it out fully compensates for the outlay One of the papers suggests, as a needed convenience, the erection of a derrick, by which one of these consolidated conservatories might be safely swung across the orchestral gulf and behind the scenes. The ladies embosom them from audience and we are compelled to make muscular training a part of their daily avocations.

JAMES NASON, a well-known thief, was arrested to the act of robbing a safe in Detroit on Tuesday, and locked up in the station-house. Soon after, he tore his shirt into strips and hanged himself, but his substitute for a rope broke, and he left him down. Some hours later he was heard praying and weeping, which exercises he continued for about thirty minutes. At the expiration of that time he was heard to say: "The best thing I can do is to beat my brains out. No, I won't do that either, because it hurts too much. Yes, I will too, it won't hurt after I am dead, anyhow," saying which he suddenly sprang up and struck his head against the hard wall of his cell with great force, and repeated the operation several times before the keeper could open the door and stop him. He was severely, but not dangerously hurt.

The Charter Convention.

As will be seen by the ordinance adopted at the meeting of the General Council Thursday night, which we publish elsewhere this morning, an election will be held on next Saturday, May 2d, for delegates to frame a new charter for the city.

It is to be regretted that in so important a matter the time is so short for the selection of good men. As it is, however, it behooves our citizens to move promptly in the matter, and put in nomination men of character and capacity. Louisville has seldom held an election so important as this will be. Wise and cool heads, and earnest and honest hearts and hands are needed to frame the laws under which our city is to grow and prosper during the next decade. Let every ward select its best, wisest and purest men for the position—not political tricksters who are seeking only their own advancement, regardless of the public good.

A communication in another column represents the names of A. O. Brannin, Esq., and George W. Morris, Esq., as candidates for delegates in the Seventh ward. They are both old citizens, of large business knowledge and experience, men of capacity and in whom integrity the people have implicit faith. If men of their caliber and character are generally selected they will give us a charter such as the wants of the city require, and which cannot fail to prove acceptable.

We have also been requested by some gentlemen in the Tenth ward to suggest the names of H. C. Caruth, Esq., and J. J. Allnutt, Esq., as proper persons to represent that ward in the charter convention. They are both excellent selections, being gentlemen of worth, position, character and ability. Mr. C. is an experienced merchant and Mr. Allnutt is known as one of the ablest and most reliable financial and energetic young members of our bar. We hope all of the gentlemen we have named will consent to the use of their names as candidates.

☞ The petition of the manufacturers in the western district for the completion of the basin was presented to the Board of Aldermen last night and passed. Some years ago the Strader wharf was purchased, and of the bonds issued at that time $100,000 was accredit set apart for the building and completion of this basin. After the vote was taken upon the petition, it was discovered, in conversation among the members, that $25,000 of the bonds so set apart had been used for another and different purpose. For what purpose? By whose authority? When? Who received the benefit of them? Who now holds those bonds? Let some one answer these questions. The money to build this basin has been set apart to it, and now, when it is to be built, where is the fourth of it? Is it missing? Were these conversational statements true? The city cannot now tax herself and issue new bonds for this purpose. Whose ax has been ground on these bonds?

The Ninth Judicial District Convention.

The Convention will meet in this city on next Saturday to nominate Democratic candidates for Judge and attorney for the Commonwealth in the Ninth Judicial District as constituted by the law under which the August election will be held. Delegates to the late city and county conventions will bear in mind that they were appointed delegates to the district convention. All the counties in the district have, we believe, appointed their delegates, and the convention will no doubt be a full one

☞ The members of the Charter Convention will not be allowed compensation. The ordinance as first passed by the Common Council allowed the delegates $5 per day during its session, which might have been made to last for the year. The Board of Aldermen very judiciously struck out this provision, and the Common Council then concurred in this action.

DORA.—Our brilliant correspondent "Dora" has been absent from her home at St. Louis for several weeks, and is now on a visit to New York, from which metropolis the readers of the COURIER will, we hope, soon have some of her admirable and always entertaining letters.

☞ We are requested by the committee to say that arrangements have been made with a line of omnibuses to connect with the Walnut street railroad, which will convey all passengers visiting Cave Hill cemetery this afternoon from its terminus to the cemetery.

☞ The ladies of Nashville will observe the 10th of May, the anniversary of the death of Stonewall Jackson, as memorial day this year.

☞ The Lexington Observer and Reporter in the following article refreshes our memory, which is always sadly at fault in regard to dates, as to the time of occurrence of some important events. It is a little singular how generally observed at different places as "Memorial Day," it is proposed that during this year the several ladies' associations in the South will determine on some day which shall be observed hereafter uniformly in all the Southern States. In view of the season in Virginia, Tennessee, Kentucky and Missouri, it would seem that the 26th of May, the anniversary of Gen. Kirby Smith's surrender, would be most suitable and appropriate. The Observer and Reporter says:

MEMORIAL DAY.—Last year April 26th was observed by the ladies in this part of Kentucky as the day to decorate with flowers the graves of southern soldiers, whose lives were the sacrifice offered to the South. In other parts of the State, and in some of the Southern States, the 10th of May was observed as Memorial Day. This spring has been so cold and backward that but few flowers can be obtained upon either April 26th or May 10th, and it so happens that both of those days come on Sunday. April 26th is the anniversary of the surrender of General Johnston; May 10th of the death of Stonewall Jackson. Gen. Johnson's surrender was before the first for land surrender. Lee surrendered April 8th; Johnson April 26th; Taylor May 4th; Buckner, 1st Smith, May 26th.

Great and beloved as Stonewall Jackson was, there were heroes, his peers, who fell on other days; Sidney Johnston, Leonidas Polk, Smart, A. P. Hill, and oh, how many more!

It is suggested that the day Mr. Davis was captured—which we believe was May 8, though we have looked for the exact date in a book called "Life of Jefferson Davis," by Alfriend, Pollard's "Lost Cause," Duke's History of Morgan's Cavalry, and Sherman's Report to the Committee on Conduct of the War, all in vain—would be the most appropriate one for memorial day. Another suggestion is that the surrender of the trans-Mississippi Department was the last day of the conquered Confederacy and the 26th of May the appropriate anniversary.

Let one day be selected and observed by those, who love either the cause or its defenders. Fair hands will strew beautiful flowers over mounds under which lie the stilled hearts of heroes, who attested the purity of their motives by their lives.

"Bring flowers, pale flowers, n'or the bier to shed,
A crown for the brow of the noble dead,
For true thro' its waves has the white rose passed,
For this is the woods warrior violet pressed,
The they smile to vain nor what once was ours,
They are love's last gift, bring ye flowers, pale flowers!"

A Chicken Lives Without a Head.

The Dayton (O.) Journal of Wednesday tells the following strange story:

Mr. Whitt, Herr, of this city, has shown us a letter from a relative in San Francisco, giving an account of a rooster that had his head chopped off on the 26th of February, and was living at the date of the letter—March 23d—and walking around as spry as life! The history of this most wonderful affair is briefly this: On the 26th of February, the cook of a restaurant in San Francisco decapitated three roosters, and on going out into the yard again a few moments afterward, he would find but two chickens. On looking around more closely, he discovered the missing rooster walking around without his head. The proprietors of the restaurant were acquainted with the wonderful circumstances, and they immediately had the rooster carefully taken care of, and fed like honey-boiled milk up into the throat. A small tube inserted in the throat Strange as it may seem, the rooster was thriving silently, and the severed neck had nearly healed over. The chicken was placed on exhibition in a popular garden in San Francisco, and thousands of people were admitted daily to see it. The correspondent from whom our letter is derive these items, saw and critically examined the headless rooster, and certifies to the truth of the relation. We have heard no theory advanced to account for the lasting strange case.

Craddock, of the Paris Kentuckian, will find more than a match for the California rooster in Bourbon county before the season is over.

SATURDAY MORNING, - - - APRIL 25, 1868.

What will Follow the Conviction of the President.

Much anxiety now exists in every portion of the country as to what will follow the expulsion of President Johnson from office, and what will be the Radical programme thereafter. This anxiety is natural, and grows out of the apprehension that the condition of our National affairs will be made worse than it is now or has been heretofore. The belief is almost universally entertained that Ben Wade will succeed to the Presidential office and fill out the unexpired term. He is known to be violent, unprincipled, and very extreme in his opinions and prejudices. He will not hesitate at the adoption of any policy which gives promise of retaining his party in power, and his whole administration will be directed to this end.

What measures will be considered available to accomplish this result cannot yet be determined, but we may rest assured that neither a decent respect for public opinion, nor the Constitution and the laws, will be for one moment permitted to stand as an obstacle in the way of Radical plans.

One of the first steps of the new administration, it is believed, will be to declare the fourteenth amendment, which is now pending, a part of the Constitution. The next will be to admit the Southern States, with their negro governments and constitutions, and to give them representation both in Congress and the electoral colleges. In this way they will secure, in the first place, the representative strength of the entire Southern population. They will not permit the constitutional amendment, in its suffrage feature, to apply to the Southern States, but will accept the constitutions adopted under Radical guidance and influences to control; but they very well know that Kentucky and Maryland will not grant negro suffrage under any circumstances, but will prefer to lose the proportion of representation which the negro population would give. Thus at the same time they crush the South and fasten negro rule upon it, and inflict a serious stab upon these two border States. They cannot reach them by their reconstruction laws, because they are not included among those which participated in the rebellion; but through the operation of the constitutional amendment they can seriously cripple them and greatly reduce their influence and power.

By some such measures as these they will enter the Presidential canvass with strong hopes of success. They will not stop to reflect that such villainy and lawlessness may create a sufficient amount of prejudice against them in the North among the honest and right thinking portion of the population to more than counterbalance any strength they may acquire in the South by such legislation, but will rush blindly on, prepared, as they suppose, to crush every impediment to their progress.

There is no making any calculations upon what such a party may not do. They repognize no law or rule of action except their own wills; they fail to remember, or if they remember, they fail to heed the fact that they have bound themselves respectively by a solemn oath to respect and obey the Constitution; they are dead to the reproaches of their consciences and are utterly unscrupulous and abandoned. They are capable of attempting to execute any piece of political rascality which their cultivated wickedness can suggest to them, and such being the fact the country has no ground to hope that anything but evil will result from their administration of the Government. The South will still be oppressed and her gigantic resources will be kept in an unavailable condition, without any ability to contribute anything toward the expenses of the Government or the reduction of the monstrous taxation under which the industry of the North, as well as of all other sections, now groans. Trade and commerce will still languish; hard times will be the universal cry, and lunacy able other evils will distress the land, and all this that a set of political tricksters, who have no sympathy for the people; no regard for their misfortunes, and no care for their interests, may retain the control of this great Government and this mighty people.

The only ray of light about this gloomy picture is, that there is a possibility that this corrupt party may be defeated in the Presidential election and sent into retirement. There is some room for hope that such a result may be brought about. The excesses of the leaders at Washington are daily and hourly making them more offensive to the people, and the indications of growing discontent are too plain to be mistaken. The impeachment outrage and the persistent efforts to fix negro suffrage upon the country; the failure to restore the Southern States to the Union after two years of tampering with the subject, and the recklessness and extravagance of the Government expenditures, all tend to convince the masses of the insecurity of those now in power to govern the country as it should be governed.

We say, then, that judging the Radical party in the future by what it has done in the past, it is but reasonable to apprehend that the downfall of Mr. Johnson and the elevation of Mr. Wade will be speedily followed by fresh outrages upon popular rights and rapid progress toward important changes in the character of our institutions.

Nothing can be more clear than that the independence of the executive branch of the Government will have been forever destroyed. Future Presidents will stand in constant dread of a ruling majority in Congress, and will not dare to oppose its usurpations, or to disobey its mandates. The President will then be a mere figure-head to the Government, with nothing to do and very seldom to be looked at. This of itself will be a subversion of the Government as established by the revolutionary fathers, for it will destroy the system of checks and balances which have proved so valuable heretofore in preventing the encroachments of one department upon the other, and thus producing complications which might have resulted in disorders and commotions, and perhaps in civil war.

When the masses coolly reflect upon these things, they must see that their only salvation lies in the total overthrow of the Radical party.

The Bonor, Mass., plate glass company are to use gas hereafter for melting pot-stock instead of wood.

Unfortunate Controversy in the Tenth Judicial District.

The contest for the office of Attorney for the Commonwealth in the Tenth Judicial District has been so close and spirited as to produce a very unpleasant personal controversy. The papers of the district are teeming with "cards" and certificates relating to the character and the political status of persons not concerned in the race, as well as to the sayings and doings of the candidates. All these statements, when sifted down to the essential facts, may be summed up as follows:

Capt J. Laurence Jones supported Mr B. F. Pullen for Mayor of the city of Paris against I. K. Elliott, Esq., who was a Democrat and formerly a Confederate soldier. During the canvass for the Democratic nomination in Madison county, Gen. John S. Williams criticised the course of his opponent in regard to the Mayoralty race, and, besides alluding to reports that Pullen had been elected sheriff of Bourbon as a tarcoat candidate, cited the Lexington Statesman's claim of Pullen's election as a Radical victory. In justifying his vote Capt. Jones asserted that Pullen had always been a conservative Union man, had been beaten by the bayonet candidate for sheriff, and was besides a man of high standing as a Christian gentleman. Capt. Jones also said that he agreed with Pullen on the local question which was the only issue in the contest for Mayor, and regarded Elliott not only as a self constituted candidate, but as a man of bad habits and a deserter from the Confederate army.

For this language Mr. Elliott sent Captain Jones a note such as is generally followed by a duel, when both parties are willing. Capt. Jones having declined a hostile meeting on account of the absence of legal complications, Mr. Elliott has published a number of certificates which certainly show that Capt. Jones' estimate of Mr. Elliott's character is not the received opinion of the community in which the latter has always had his home. It is easy to conceive how an impetuous young man, in the heat of discussion, may overstep the proper limits of speech, and use language his calmer judgment may not approve. When he becomes satisfied that he has erred in that way, his duty is plain. In regard to trivial matters, men discover and correct their errors of opinion every day, and with the utmost facility. Why do they not with equal readiness retract hasty remarks and correct unjust impressions affecting the character of their fellows? The fact that a few will suspect an improper motive makes it all the more incumbent upon gentlemen and Christians of those who regard but their life's blood to establish Southern independence, will not cool so long as time shall last. It is with them an enthusiasm and a creed. Their admiration for those who during the war were so gallantly struggling to sustain a fallen cause, and who were staking their lives upon an issue which was more than doubtful, still lives in more than its original power, and leads them to the graves of those who perished in that great effort for what they believed to be the preservation of civil liberty.

The ladies of the city will, as they did one year ago to day, decorate the graves of the dead heroes who lie buried in Cave Hill Cemetery. Extensive preparations, we learn, have been made to make the occasion an imposing and a beautiful one, and we have no doubt that thousands will be attracted to witness the imposing ceremonies.

The emotions which prompt these tokens of respect for the heroic dead are natural to the human heart, and are as common to the savage as to the civilized man. But the circumstances under which those men died; the fact that the cause in which they perished failed; their heroic efforts to secure success, their sacrifices and their suffering, give peculiar interest to their unhappy fate.

In the beautiful language of the poet O'Hara—

"On fame's eternal camping ground,
Their silent tents are spread,
And glory guards with solemn round
The bivouac of the dead."

No more touching spectacle could any where be witnessed than the bands of beauty covering the graves of these dead heroes with floral decorations. It is the tribute of beauty and virtue to courage and self-sacrifice, and is as appropriate as it is beautiful. It is an attestation of the fact that—

"Those do not die who fall in a great cause,
Their hearts may moulder in the clay,
Their blood be strong to clay gates and castle walls,
But still their spirits walk abroad."

And the affections of those in whose cause they fell cluster around their memories and give them immortality.

The ceremonies by the ladies at Cave Hill will take place at 4 P. M. to-day.

Dickens' Farewell Reading.

Mr. Dickens gave his last reading at New York on the evening of the 20th. The ballfield was packed to its utmost capacity, and many hundreds were unable to get in at all. When the readings had been concluded, the entire audience arose and joined in hearty cheers, while the ladies waved their handkerchiefs, and loud calls were made for a speech from the retiring reader. Mr. Dickens, in response to the demand, returned to his desk, and when the audience had relapsed into its former quiet, he spoke as follows:

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN: The shadow of our word has impended over us all this evening, but the time has come at last when the shadow must fall. It is a short word, but its weight is not to be measured by its length. Last Thursday evening, while I read the story of David Copperfield, I felt that there was another occasion then about to the words of old Mr. Peggotty: "My future life lies over the sea." And when I read from the book to-night, reverting to the Pickwick Papers, I realized that I must shortly take leave of an old friend associated with Mr Winkle, Sr. The relations of us in this place between us have been to me of the most satisfactory character. There has been on my part the most earnest desire to please you, and you have taken to me kindly, and on your part in the most sympathetic manner. I have to thank you for your fatherly indulgence, for your forbearance, for your consideration, and for your sustained support, which has been to me, in the present summer of Old England—never as a public audience, but always dear, personal friends, and ever with the truest sympathy and affection. In bidding you a final farewell, I say—"God bless us, every one!" and God bless the land in which I leave you!

Shipping Pears from California to New York.

The experience of shipping fresh pears to New York by way of the Isthmus of Panama has shown but so well that it is probable that hereafter a large amount of such fruit will find its way to the Eastern markets from California. At present the charges are high, and the time consumed in the transit is great, but experiments have convinced that very likely to result in time to the shippers; but the result proved quite the contrary. Some of the first pears received in New York from San Francisco sold at auction at enormous prices, as high as $60 per box being realized for the choicest, and all bringing good prices. The grapes, too, went through in fair order, were sold quickly and at high rates. Owing to the long time, say three weeks, required to get them to New York by way of Panama, it is impossible to send any but the coarsest and least desirable varieties of pears, but it is believed that when the Pacific Railroad is finished and they can be laid down in the Atlantic cities the fruit will not care for even a rapid flight like on the Cheg, a small steamer on the Laramie plains, without they gave out meeting on the Smoky Hill route, and so and the Government won't give it up. Cheaper steamers are working, but the generality of the people have very little confidence in their seaworthiness. Red Cloud would only mourn for, so he, unlike other civilized, refuses to pay wages. The Indians are commencing all sorts of depredations on both sides of us, principally running off stock.

I could give you some interesting items of the state of affairs, but I fear I have wearied your patience already. I beg of you to send me one of your Courants, and the price list, and please again, give my love to Aunt J—— and all the family.

Yours, very respectfully,
LOVELL.

Children's Fashions for May.

A novelty for boys is the "Grecian" cape, copied from that introduced this season for gentlemen, but which is found equally as useful for their young male off-spring.

It is worn when the overcoat is discarded, and may form a part of it, during very cold weather, but is, at any rate, a most comfortable addition to ordinary spring clothing on the cool, damp days which are not unfrequently found to linger along until June.

The "Grecian" cape is a sort of Talma, made of light or dark cloth, with velvet rolling collar, the cloth sometimes being reversible, and showing a bright underside. It is worn by young gentlemen of any age, commencing at about ten years, and, if carried with grace, presents a very jaunty appearance. A cape the color of the coat, ornamented with a band of velvet, the color of the collar, is very stylish—light gray and claret-color, for instance.

For very small boys gored dresses of fine checked or striped piqué are almost universal. They are so easily and prettily braided in white or colors, so entirely uninjured by frequent washing, as to recommend them highly to mothers, who find them the cheapest and neatest of all dresses. Plaids have been worn quite extensively, but they are giving place to cooler looking materials.

The Marie Antoinette scarf is made for little girls, as well as for their mammas. Most charming little scarfs are made of washing silk, checked in purple and white, green and white lilac and white, and blue and white, gored and trimmed with a number of very narrow frills of the same, bound with the contrasting color, and these frills sometimes form bretelles across the shoulder and descend so as to describe a tunic, sashes, upon the skirt. Otherwise, they are frill on frill, shallow scolloped rows round the bottom of the skirt, and a little Marie Antoinette scarf, trimmed to match, and tied at the back.

The dresses will be made this summer for little girls, with a number of very narrow flounces, "baby" waists, and an overdress of white nansook, with a high body and full skirt. Over the left side a sash of silk or ribbon is tied behind, and the little straw hat trimmed with the same color.

New straw hats, a la Chinois, are the novelty for little girls. They are round, shaped something like a tin lid, with a little crown set in the top. The straw is called "Lady Washington" hats have the crown imperial, and brim turned up at the sides.—[Demorest's Monthly.

CITY ITEMS.

☞ The great virtue of Dr. Limerick's cure is that it leaves the system in a perfectly healthy condition, while he had either to be worn off. Read certificates to another column.

☞ NATIVE WINES.—Some time since we stopped at Pecanic, and were really surprised to see the old storehouse there all filled with wine casks.

The amount of Mr. Speer's stock of Port Grape Wine on hand is almost fabulous. Pipes, casks, demijohns are filled, and there upon tiers of racks up and down stairs, and in some cases huge vats occupy every available spot, leaving only that alley way through which to walk. It is an illimitable quantity of wine. None is sold until it has acquired the age of four years, and the brands, 1, 2, 3 and 4, are of the first, second, third and fourth year's vintage. Our Cincinnati lover seems to be the oldest of the above wine direct from Mr. Speer.—Patterson.

☞ Dr. Limerick's chill cure breaks chills prevents their return, and as a tonic is guaranteed. Read certificates in another column.

☞ This afternoon, at 4 o'clock, Mr. C. C. Spencer will sell without reserve two large and valuable lots on Gregory street, between Fourth and Fifteenth, to which we have before referred, and to which we again call attention.

☞ The attention of every and every man, married, or [illegible] employment, is called to the advertisement of Baxter, Kyle & Co., in the next column.

A KENTUCKY NEGRO ON THE ROCKY MOUNTAINS.

Interesting Letter from Him.

We give below a letter from a colored man, born a slave, to a white friend, a relative of his former master. The letter will speak for itself, and cold must be the heart that is not touched by it. The attachments formed by the associations of childhood, common in human nature alike, of all colors and conditions, outlive all changes of relations and habitation, and the colored man from the Rocky Mountains looks tenderly back to his "old Kentucky home" and the white folks with whom its pleasures were shared. But the finding of that scrap of newspaper—'twas something to excite "surprises and joy."

Lovell's wish to have the Courier sent him shall be gratified, and he will be a little surprised to see his own letter in the list number he gets. He writes a good, clear hand, and as we have followed copy closely, it will be seen he expresses himself well.

SHERMAN STATION, SUMMIT BLACK HILLS, April, 1868.

Mr. W:

DEAR SIR: Failing to receive answers to several letters written to aunt J—— and not hearing from home, I have become anxious for their welfare. Despairing of ever getting a letter from her, I hope the same blessing you have always extended for me will induce you to drop a line or so in regard to your health, and it will give me pleasure to hear from all the family, white and colored.

Our favor you can do me, if you will be kind enough. It is to find out the different prices of the Courier for me, and let me know. I would send the money for one subscription, but am afraid it would not get through.

I find myself thinking of home oftener than perhaps I ought, but I cannot help it. I picked up a piece of south paper the other day carelessly, and looked at it. Your imagination cannot picture my surprise and joy at beholding a piece of paper sent to me in our Indian in darkness, from my old Kentucky. There was just enough of it to inform me what paper it was and to whom it was sent. It was a piece of the Courier advertisement, all offering a reward for some colored person for their [illegible] paper. I [illegible] an advertisement of a man willing to get as a substitute.

To be understood, I am in charge of a sleeping car which follows the end of the track of the U. P. R. R. We are at present located on the summit or top of the range of Black Hill Range, an eastern spur of the mountains. This, as you know, is a variable country. At this time, the 12th day of April, there is four inches of snow. At the head men of the road are out from New York on an excursion—Dr. Durant, President of the road, and other men of note. I will inform you, our car follows the track laying outfit, and I am afraid we will encounter the Indians, as the Sioux, the most warlike of Indian chiefs, also the most learned and educated of them all, has threatened to take out outfit. But we are well armed. Red Cloud sent a dispatch from Fort Laramie, which I [illegible] from here, to General Sherman, that he did not care for even had armed fight him on the Cheg, a small stream on the Laramie plains, without they gave out meeting on the Smoky Hill route, and so and the Government won't give it up. Cheaper steamers are working, but the generality of the people have very little confidence in their seaworthiness. Red Cloud would only mourn for, so he, unlike other civilized, refuses to pay wages. The Indians are commencing all sorts of depredations on both sides of us, principally running off stock.

I could give you some interesting items of the state of affairs, but I fear I have wearied your patience already. I beg of you to send me one of your Couriers, and the price list, and please again, give my love to Aunt J—— and all the family.

Yours, very respectfully,
LOVELL.

DEAR SIR: I commenced that you are about to go to Louisville, and I am not free from chills. I have been troubled with them since the month of August last, and have tried almost everything that I have been told would cure them, but to no effect. I have also been told that your Chill Cure was a humbug, but I am willing to try anything that will cure me, and I am glad to say that it has done so. I have not had a chill since I commenced using your medicine, and I am willing to recommend it to all who are afflicted with chills. Please send me a bottle of your Chill Cure, and I will remit you the money by return mail. Yours, &c.,

JOHN T. MORRIS.

WASHINGTON, April 24.

NELSON'S ARGUMENT,

which closed this afternoon, made a decided impression on the Senate. Radical lawyers of the Senate gave it close attention, and even Howard admitted it presented imposing matter.

JUDGE BLACK.

Nelson's explanation of the reasons why Judge Black withdrew from the case places that gentleman in an unfavorable light. It appears from his statement that Black withdrew because the President refused to send an armed vessel to take possession of the Island of Alta Vela.

Grouch-ist addresses the court to-morrow.

THE WAR OFFICE.

Just before the close of the Senate proceedings to-day a message was announced from the President, but the Senate adjourned without taking any action thereon. It is understood, however, that the President withdraws the name of Thos. Ewing for secretary of War and substitutes that of Schofield. Mr Ewing's nomination was recalled at his own urgent request, and he urged the appointment of Schofield.

THE OMINOUS.

The precise object of sending in another nomination, it may there be, has not transpired, but it will be remembered some months ago that it was proposed to Johnson, as a compromise, that if Gov. Cox, of Ohio, be appointed Stanton's successor, he would be confirmed by the Senate.

But such cannot be the motive now, for impeachment has too far progressed to admit of concession from the President, or his prosecutors. It creates much talk to-night.

THE WAR OFFICE BARNACLE.

A round of smoking hyperbles from Denville, Virginia, formally congratulated Stanton to-day on his patriotic conduct in thwarting the President's designs by holding his office in defiance of him. The War Office Barnacle thanked them and assured them all difficulties would be adjusted soon, and the affairs of the Government would go on smoothly. Stanton evidently has faith in his fellow conspirators.

THAD. STEVENS

counts on thirty-eight Senators for conviction. Yesterday he was visited by a Southern lady, and at the house of a rather queer appearance. She hoped he would at least not hang Ben Butler. She replied: Mr. Stevens I hope to be there myself, but I am afraid I won't meet you.

ARKANSAS SENATORS.

Rice and McDonald, Senators elect from Arkansas, will arrive to-morrow. Two Congressional carpet-baggers are here also.

FALSE STATEMENT.

The statement in the Western papers that John Morgan's remains were reclaimed here by the Kentucky delegation is untrue. Two of General Morgan's personal friends were present and several other Kentuckians.

A number of spectators lined the streets. The address was delivered by Hon. J. Q. A. Fellows.

The house occupied by the family stood at the bottom of a steep hill, and a tree on the extreme top, after being uprooted by the storm, came crashing down the precipice and right through the house, the hat and lore most. The mother and daughter were in bed at the time, were knocked clear out of the house, both receiving fatal injuries. The father of the family was also shockingly bruised and battered, while a little baby who occupied the cradle was landed in the fireplace and escaped almost unhurt.

Press Dispatches.

40th CONGRESS—FIRST SESSION.

SENATE ..... WASHINGTON, April 24.

At the opening of the court Chief Justice Chase stated that the first business was the order offered for consideration yesterday by Mr. Sumner, that the hour for the opening of the Senate should be 10 o'clock. The order was adopted—41 against 11.

MR EDMUNDS offered an order to admit official reporters to report the speeches on the final deliberations of the Senate, objected to by Mr. Sumner and went over under the rule.

MR. NELSON resumed his speech and concluded his argument of yesterday to support of the President that no offences are impeachable except those which were deemed crimes and misdemeanors by the common law at the time the Constitution was framed.

Referring to the portion of Mr. Boutwell's speech which illustrates the President's alleged perverse nature by his treatment of a gentleman who was to have been one of his counsel, Mr. Nelson made a statement that Judge Black withdrew from the case simply because the President refused to send vessels to seize Alta Vela and the counsel was made on the ground of public policy, that the solicitation of friends and implied threats of enemies. Quoting the expressions of Mr Boutwell that the advice given to the President by Mr Cobb, of Nebraska, as to the duty of civil, their Lord or counsel, offered in lieu of having their places, he remarked the language to that they had put in evidence to show conclusively that Stanton had practically defied the advice that character and that he now might cry "save me from my friends" if they made him as corrupt as they.

Alluding briefly to the high commendation of the President, written by Mr Stanton in 1865, and to the strong sense of the fact that the President is not charged with any offence, Nelson argued that the present Thirty-ninth Congress, Mr Nelson proceeded to consider the articles of impeachment separately. He held in the first place that there is a distinction made by both common and statute law between a crime and an attempt to commit a crime, and that civil insane bill relates only to actual removals from office, and the President made none. The charges made in most of the articles in that made from this objection, which although technical, should still be considered to have weight. He would maintain three propositions. First. That the tenure of office bill is void. II. It is not. Mr Stanton is not covered by it, and third, even if it is legal and applicable, the President is not guilty of crime as charged in the articles.

Mr. Nelson will resume the debates on the invitation of the Constitution and on the passage of the act of 1789, into nonsense legal authorities. He also that the question of power of the President to remove Mr. Stanton is already settled by the action of Congress at that time, and cannot therefore be had ground for honestly forming the opinion on which he acted, or on the consideration of requirement that the Attorney General is to furnish the President with opinions in writing, and the fact that such opinions are collected and bound by order of Congress. Mr. Nelson argued that they have a quasi authoritative character for the President's action. He then cited a large number of opinions by various Attorney Generals showing the construction of the Government, in which they place the same construction on the law of 1789, and express the same views regarding the power of removal as President Johnson.

He referred also to the opinion of Mr. Jefferson, to that of President Jackson, and to that of the United States Senate in expunging the resolution of censure on the latter, and showed that it rested on the principles which underlie the action now, which ever since its passage had stood in the statute book unrepealed.

He held the President had followed the example of certain members of Congress in disregarding the assertion of supervision, and was certainly justified in so doing, as was evidenced by the stone which had been heaped upon him. Mr. Nelson stated that the prevailation of the right of freedom of speech was indispensable to the preservation of liberties.

After a brief conversation of the 11th article, which he said was sufficiently answered by his remarks concerning the previous article, he referred to the charge of Mr. Bentwell that the President wished to control the elections in Southern States, and asked how that could be possible with the military and the law enforced by Congress in command, and exercising control over all that region.

In conclusion, he reminded the Senate that trouble and conflict often had usually followed the exercise of revolutionary or unconstitutional power to the deposition of kings and rulers of the people, and begged them to remember the high duties now devolving upon them as to mend the reputations of their consciences, their country's and their God.

The Court and Senate, then, at 4:15 P. M., adjourned.

ATLANTA, GA., April 23.—The counting of votes is progressing slowly, and it will be several days before the result is officially announced. As believed, the Radicals have carried this District, electing Peters by a majority, and giving a majority for the Legislature and Bullock.

The Democrats claim five out of the seven Congressmen elected and a majority of the Legislature. Republicans are confident of the success of Bullock, and the Republicans are equally sure of the election of Gerard. But all this is conjecture. The officers count will show a close race.

The vote is not yet counted. The day was spent in assorting and comparing with the registers.

The accounts from Southwest Georgia are still more favorable to the Democratic. Nearly every county has gone against the constitution, and elects a full Democratic ticket.
